

DAUGHERTY CASE TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT BY STATE SUPREME COURT AFTER HEARING

RAILROADS ASK CUT IN SURCHARGE

Petition Now Laid Before I. C. C. Regarded Step to Boost Revenues

NEW PLAN PROPOSED

Discrimination Against Small Roads Charged

Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Railroads of the country today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to modify its surcharge-pooling plan for saving the credit of many carriers.

At the same time they presented for approval, a plan for a railroad credit corporation to provide machinery with which to operate the scheme.

Today's petition is another step in the effort of railroads to secure added revenues. The commission on October 20 denied a plea for a temporary blanket 15 per cent rate increase, and presented an alternative unique and untried in America.

Approval was given surcharges of $3 and $6 a car on some types of freight and 1 and 2 cents per 100 pounds on others. Major farm crops were exempted. The money realized was to be pooled and used by railroads in meeting interest on their bonds. December 1 was the deadline set for the roads to present machinery for handling the pool. The surcharges would be automatically fixed on March 31, 1932, unless ordered off earlier.

Some railroad executives advanced serious objections to the commission's plan. They argued it amounted to more prosperous lines making large gifts to weaker roads. It also was urged that such gifts would be illegal.

The Association of Railway Executives turned the matter over to their advisory committee. That board conferred with a majority of the State Commerce Commission, and the plan represented to-day was then worked out.

To meet the most serious objections five amendments were asked. These are:

That railroads should be granted loans instead of gifts.

That the commission remove its command that surcharges should be (Continued on Page Two.)

YOUTH DISAPPEARS WHEN DEATH LOOMS

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—An Ohio State University sophomore whom physicians have given only six months more to live was believed today to have fled to the Pacific coast to die at sea.

The youth is William B. Moore, Jr., of Lisbon, a member of the Seaman's Union. He disappeared November 9 after physicians told him he would die within six months of a stomach ailment.

Belief that Moore had gone westward to join the Merchant Marine was expressed by his roommate, with whom he had left his watch and fraternity pin to be forwarded to his parents.

Moore attended the Case School of Applied Science before coming here.

SLEEPING SICKNESS FATAL TO DOCTOR

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 19.—(AP)—A victim of sleeping sickness for 300 hours, Dr. A. J. Berresheim, 50-year-old Louisville surgeon died here today.

He was kept alive by constant injections of a fluid containing dextrose which served as his food.

Most sleeping sickness victims die within two weeks after contracting the disease, physicians said.

Doctors termed the patient's existence "synthetic." Dr. Berresheim contracted sleeping sickness following an illness of pneumonia.

G. O. P. THRONE TOTTERS UNDER SENATOR FESS

Wets in Party Demand Ohioan's Resignation; Drys Not Averse

Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The unsteady throne of the Republican party chairmanship against its quaking under the unwilling occupant, Senator Fess, of Ohio.

House Republican anti-prohibitionists are leading a new assault on the holder of the thankless job. They are demanding Fess' resignation because he recently stated he would use his influence "to prevent the party from committing a fatal blunder in asking for repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

Even before the wets got into action, a movement had started looking to installation of a new chairman at the forthcoming December meeting of the national committee. However, this movement was not anti-Fess. It was led by some who believed now was the time to reorganize rather than next June.

Now the uprising of the house wets, led by Representative Britten, of Illinois, is believed to have settled the issue. Fess' friends do not believe he will quit under fire.

Representative Schafer of Wisconsin and Laguardia of New York, joined Britten in issuing caustic statements. Britten called for the resignation in "plain justice to thousands of Republican office holders who have little or no sympathy with the silly Volstead law."

Laguardia said:

"Senator Fess is the best asset that the Democratic party has."

Schafer held the chairman should continue the way he is doing "if he wants to be the physician at the death, and the leading pall-bearer at the burial of the Republican party."

WHITE REFUSES TO INTERVENE

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Tilby Smith must die in the electric chair tomorrow night for plotting the murder of his wife. Governor George White this afternoon refused to intervene in the case after he studied Smith's appeal for a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment.

Smith was examined mentally today by Dr. C. H. Creed of the state bureau of examination and classification, at the request of the state board of pardons and paroles.

Dr. Creed declined to reveal his findings but those connected with the board intimated he had determined that Smith has the mentality of a nine-year-old child. However, they said that he has sufficient mentality to distinguish between right and wrong.

Immediately after the examination the board and S. P. Dunkle, executive secretary to Governor White, went to the executive mansion to lay their recommendations before the governor for his action on Smith's application for a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

The question of Smith's mentality was raised before the board yesterday by his attorney, Dennis Dunleavy of Ashtabula, who argued for a commutation.

MAN AND WIFE DIE IN SUICIDE PACT

Lima, O., —(AP)—Ill health was blamed by authorities today for the suicide pact of George Stevens, 60, World War veteran, and his wife, Daisy, 58.

The two were found sitting in chairs facing each other in a gas filled room yesterday.

Authorities said Stevens, suffering from a tubercular complaint probably led to their action.

TREASURY REPORT

Fayette-Co. Asks Review of Decision Reversed by Appellate Court

DEFENDANT IS THERE

Admissibility of Evidence Chief Point Argued

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—The Ohio Supreme Court today took under advisement the application for review of the Appellate Court's decision, reversing the conviction of Mal S. Daugherty on charges of irregularities in connection with his administration of the defunct Ohio State Bank at Washington C. H., of which he was president.

Daugherty and his brother Harry M. Daugherty, former U. S. Attorney General were interested spectators at the hearing before the state's highest tribunal which consumed about three-quarters of an hour. The defendant sat in the rear of the chamber with other spectators while the former U. S. Attorney General occupied a seat alongside the prosecuting counsel. He did not participate in the arguments, however.

N. L. McLean, Fayette County Prosecutor and E. J. Schneider, Cincinnati, special prosecutor pleaded the State's case asking for reversal of the decision of the 9th Appellate District (Akron) reversing Daugherty's conviction and ordering a new trial on the grounds of error in conduct of the trial.

The 9th Appellate District Court reviewed the Common Pleas Court trial, after the 2nd District Court had asked to be excused from hearing it.

The two prosecutors confined their argument chiefly to upholding the trial court's ruling on admission of evidence and his charge to the jury. Considerable time was taken in explaining the transaction in which it was charged that Daugherty had misapplied bank funds to his own credit through juggling of checks and notes obtained from John Perrill, Fayette county farmer.

This transaction, they contended, was designed to defraud the bank and they argued that evidence submitted showed that Perrill had never intended to become obligated to the bank in signing the note and checks, aggregating $53,350.

Attorney Paul Howland, Cleveland, representing Daugherty, argued in support of the Appeals Court decision and contended that under the rules of the Supreme Court, that tribunal can take no other action than to affirm the Appellate Court.

"This was not a trial on an indictment charging Daugherty with specific offenses, but an inquest into the whole banking situation in Fayette county," Howland declared, contending the trial court had admitted evidence concerning the organization of the bank which had no bearing whatsoever of misconduct against Daugherty.

MINER SUSPECTED OF KILLING GIRL

St. Clairsville, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Arrest of Marty Blom 20, Stewartsville miner, was asked by Prosecutor Paul Waddell today, acting on belief that Marie Doyle, 17, night have been slain in Belmont County, O., and her body then taken to the spot near Wheeling, W. Va., where it was found.

Waddell said he had been informed that Blom made the first suggestion that the dead girl might be Marie Doyle. He said he wished to question the miner as to his reasons for that belief and as to his own association with the girl, a former resident of Bellaire, O.

Dudley Doyle, 17, estranged husband of the girl, is held in Wheeling, in connection with the killing. Waddell said he might question the youth late today.

DEPUTY DRY CHIEF EX-SCHOOL TEACHER

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Milton S. Cox, McArthur, county superintendent of schools in Pickaway county, today was appointed Deputy State Prohibition Commissioner by Governor George White.

Cox succeeds Edmund G. Matthews who yesterday was elevated to the post of commissioner. He is a member of the brotherhood of railway trainmen and was a former member of the house of representatives from Vinton county.

During the Donahay administration Cox served as chief of the division of markets in the department of agriculture.

YOUNG DIVORCEE SHOT IN LOVERS' QUARREL

Elyria, O., —(AP)—With a bullet wound in her head, the body of Alice Dernier, 21-year-old divorcee of Grafton, was found Thursday in an auto three miles south of here on Durkee road. In a ditch nearby was found her sweetheart, Michael J. Benzak, 28, a farmer who lived on the same road. Benzak with a bullet wound on his head, recovered consciousness long enough to tell deputy sheriffs he shot the girl and then attempted suicide.

Gunman Trapped Through Bluff, Makes $2,500,000 Bid For Freedom

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(AP)—An unparalleled episode in the history of crime has developed from a chain of circumstances that began when a much-wanted gangster, for once in his life, was bluffed.

Never before in America, say investigators, has there been an offer to bargain with the law comparable to "Gus" Winkler's attempt to escape prosecution for one of the largest if not the largest bank robbery on record.

His offer to recover most of the $2,500,000 looted from the Lincoln National Bank and Trust company in Nebraska's capital in September, 1930, police say, makes bank robbers of history look like pickers.

And it all happened because Winkler was bluffed into admitting his identity by a Michigan sheriff last August.

Otherwise he might never have been arrested.

Coincidence surrounding Winkler's capture, plus subsequent developments have proved almost as startling as the tales of killings, bank robberies and kidnappings attributed to the once-powerful gang of which he was a member.

After the Lincoln robbery police scoured the country for Winkler, crony of "Scarface Al" Capone and "Killer" Fred Burke.

It wasn't the Nebraska "job" alone that spurred their search. Rather it was the fact that any and all members of the gang were Continued on Page Two.

ITALY AND AMERICA AGREE, DUCE SAYS

Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Grandi was enabled to tell President Hoover today that Italy and the United States see eye to eye on the world topics they have reviewed.

The authority came directly from Premier Mussolini in Rome, over the Trans-Atlantic telephone, he relayed his conviction the Hoover-Stimson-Grandi talks would "go a long way towards increasing the harmony of Italian-American relations."

DIVORCE GRANTED TO DOLLY SISTER

Mineola, N. Y., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Rozika Dolly, one of the members of the well known sister team of the stage, has obtained a divorce from the wealthy Mortimer Davls.

The interlocutory decree, filed yesterday by Referee Charles Wood, becomes final in three months. Miss Dolly is in Paris.

The taking of testimony was secret. The charge was that Davis had been friendly with "a blonde woman" in a Miami hotel at the time of the Sharkey-Stribling bout there.

Jack Renault, Canadian boxer, was the principal witness. He testified that he had seen Davis and the blonde woman together in the hotel.

A report that a settlement was made by which Miss Dolly is to get $18,000 a year could not be substantiated.

HICCUGH VICTIM BETTER, IS BELIEF

Mansfield, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Hiccoughs continued to wrack Ira A. King, Mansfield garage owner, today, but physicians for the first time held out hope for his recovery.

He was reported "holding his own," and physicians believed the hiccoughing stage, now in its 12th day, would pass away as he regains his strength.

He is now able to take some nourishment and the hiccoughs are less severe.

OHIO PAYS TRIBUTE TO ILLUSTRIOUS SON AT HIRAM

Hiram, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Ohio broadcast to the nation today a memorial to one of the state's most distinguished sons.

It was the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of James Abram Garfield, twentieth president of the United States.

Speakers recalled the tragic days in 1881, through which the nation waited for word from the bedside of the president in Elberon, N. J., where he lay mortally wounded from an assassin's bullet, until his death.

Happier days of the president's life also were brought to mind. These were the days when as a boy he waded in the streams around his birthplace in Orange Township, Cuyahoga county, and "let the shiners hit against his legs."

Those were days of hard work to help his widowed mother keep her household intact, of blighted ambitions to be a seaman on the Great Lakes, and of long trips as a boatman along the old Ohio-Pennsylvania canal.

The days in Hiram were some of the most important in his life. He came here at the age of 20 to attend the Western reserve electric institute, as Hiram College was then known, and 6 years later he was president of the institution.

It was the citizens of this region who elected Garfield to the State Senate and Congress, and who bid farewell to him as he joined the Union army in the Civil War, from which he returned as a general.

David Ingalls Here To Launch Campaign For Ohio Governor

32-year-old Assistant Naval Secretary Meets Many at Reception

David S. Ingalls, of Cleveland, assistant secretary of the Navy in charge of aeronautics, 32-year-old Republican aspirant for the office of Governor of Ohio, spent Wednesday afternoon and evening in Washington C. H. receiving hundreds of voters of both sexes at the Cherry Hotel, dining with Paul H. Hurley Post, American Legion and the Legion Auxiliary at Memorial Hall, and later receiving a delegation of colored war veterans at the court-house.

How ever, several hours here mingling with the public and as guest of the Legionnaires and Auxiliary, he made no political utterance or speech. He expressed his deep appreciation to the legion post and auxiliary for the dinner served, and his thanks for the warm reception accorded him generally.

He was accompanied in his flying trip from Cleveland, by Earl Johnson, six foot five inch campaign manager.

It was the first public meeting in connection with Mr. Ingalls' campaign for the governorship, and the young candidate for governor appeared to have made a very favorable impression while here.

At the Cherry Hotel he received men and women voters from 3:30 o'clock to 5:30, dined and spent a social hour with the American Legion post and the Auxiliary, returned to the hotel for another hour or two of handshaking, and found time to slip away for a while to greet the colored Legionnaires at the courthouse, leaving immediately after the reception for Columbus en route to Cleveland and Washington.

Homer Eggleston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eggleston of near Waterloo, who for several years has been M.B.R. Ingalls' chauffeur, was not with him on his hurried trip to this city.

Ingalls was an "early bird" in entering the campaign for governor, his announcement coming just two days after the November election. Continued on page two.

LOVE TRIANGLE TRAPS THREE IN VIOLENT DEATH

Man and Wife Are Killed by Roomer Who Then Cheats Law Suiciding

Dennison, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A feud between two railroad conductors over the wife of one of them ended today with the death of all three.

Thomas Wheeler, 34, shot and killed himself at midnight less than three hours after he had slain Mrs. Blanche Schneider, 34, who had spurned his attentions, and her husband, Russell C. Schneider.

Wheeler's body was found lying beside his automobile in which he had eluded posses of two counties for nearly three hours after the Schneidegers were shot down on a downtown street.

Beside the body were two guns he had used—a 22 caliber revolver with which Schneider had been felled and a shotgun which had been fired at Mrs. Schneider.

Events leading up to the shooting were told at a coroner's inquest early today by the Schneider's 12-year old son, Russell, Jr. Ill feeling had existed between the two men since Wheeler, who was unmarried, roomed at the Schneider home some time ago, Russell said.

Last night as Mr. and Mrs. Schneider, Russell, and a neighbor, Mrs. Eugene Rennicker, were walking home from a motion picture show, Wheeler drove up beside them and jumped out of his car, Russell related.

The boy said he heard a shot and his mother cried, "Oh!"

As she fell, mortally wounded with buckshot in her back, her husband sprang toward Schneider and shouted: "Say, you." There was another shot, this time from the revolver, and Schneider fell on the body of his wife. He was shot in the heart and died instantly.

Mrs. Rennicker was slightly (Continued On Page Six.)

DOG COMES FIRST IN WOMAN'S LOVE

SO, SHE SHOTS SUITER WHO OBJECTS AND THREATENS TO KILL POOCH

Kansas City, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Because he threatened to kill her pet Pekingese, police say, Milton Smith, 28, was shot to death today by his 21-year old sweetheart, Hazel Blacketer.

Miss Blacketer was quoted by police as saying Smith accused her of loving "Snooks" more than she loved him. He started to leave her apartment, she said, taking the dog which he threatened to kill.

With Snooks cuddled under her fur coat, Miss Blacketer, sitting at police headquarters said:

"I'm sorry I shot him. But he had no business treating my dog that way."

Smith was shot after he reached the entrance of the apartment house where Miss Blacketer, known to police as "Bubbles," said they had lived together for eight months.

She said the quarrel over the dog developed after she had taken a pint of whiskey away from Smith and broken it.

EMPLOYMENT RELIEF ON CLINTON-CO. ROADS

Wilmington, O., —(AP)—Plans for repair of 43 miles of county roads during the winter, to provide work for the county's unemployed, have been prepared by the Clinton County Commissioner's. The work will cost approximately $10,503, contracts will be awarded Nov. 25.

Ambassador Dawes Hints America Ready to Act to End Conflict

LEAGUE FACES CRISIS

Japanese Accuse Russia of Aiding China

By The Associated Press.

Reports from Tientsin said the provincial capital of Heilungkiang was in the grasp of the Japanese army.

A message to the Chinese Eastern railway offices at Harbin said Japanese troops had entered the walled city early this morning, shortly after the last of the Chinese defenders had evacuated.

General Mah Chan-Shan was reported leading his Chinese forces in orderly retreat along the Koshan railway which runs eastward from Tientsin.

Dispatches from Aganchi, south of Tientsin, said that town was quiet with 250 Chinese railway guards maintaining order.

Chiang Kai-Shek, president of the Nanking government, announced he was going to Manchuria immediately.

In Paris China's delegate reiterated his assertion to the League of Nations council that China will not accept direct negotiations with Japan before the Japanese army evacuates Manchuria.

Paris, Nov. 19.—(AP)—United States Ambassador Charles G. Dawes who has been conferring with leaders of the League of Nations' council regarding the Manchurian dispute, talked this morning with Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese member, and it was reported that the United States was ready to join a concerted international move to get Japan to withdraw her Manchurian troops.

"Things are moving fast," Ambassador Dawes said after Dr. Sze had left his hotel. He declined to amplify that statement, but it was known that he has been in communication with Washington and that both he and his government are deeply interested in Manchurian developments.

It was expected that General Dawes would talk with Aristide Briand this afternoon and that the council would ask Kenkichi Yoshizawa, the Japanese representative to present in writing the declaration he made yesterday regarding Japan's demands.

Dr. Sze declared in another note to the council that the Manchurian crisis was a "life and death" issue for the League and for the 1932 disarmament conference, repeating that China never would direct negotiations with Japan before evacuation.

BANKERS APPROVE LIQUIDATION PLAN

Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Bank Commissioners in a majority of the states have informed Senator Van Dusenberg they approve liberalization of the Federal Reserve act.

This was the result made possible today by the minator, of a poll made with the Cooperation of Bank Commissioners, Reichert, of Michigan.

The proposals submitted were:

To admit to rediscount certain bonds and warrants of states, counties and cities, and other tax districts, and to create under proper safeguards a temporary emergency rediscount privilege covering any sound assets in a solvent bank.

Bank Commissioners voted yes in 25 states while six approved with reservations. Four voted yes on part of the proposals and no on the other part. New Jersey, California, and Minnesota rejected the plan and ten states were either non-committal or did not reply.

RATE CUTS ASKED

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Electric rate reductions aggregating approximately three-quarters of a million dollars annually are sought by The Ohio Power Company, Canton, in a petition filed with the State Utilities Commission today. Previous reductions made by the company will bring the total yearly reduction to approximately $1,990,000, the commission said.

suspected of crimes ranging from Chicago's St. Valentine's day massacre of 1929 and the slaying of Frankie Yale in New York to dozens of midwest bank robberies and kidnappings that had netted millions in loot and ransom money.

Winkler, long known to police as a graduate of the notorious "Egan Rats" gang of St. Louis, had evaded capture, while others of the gang, notably "Killer" Burke, had failed. For nearly a year after the Lincoln robbery the whereabouts of Winkler was a mystery.

But in August his luck suddenly ended in St. Joseph, Mich., the same town that had proved a jinx to Burke.

Burke had been imprisoned for life for killing a St. Joseph policeman following a traffic dispute. Winkler had an auto accident. His skull was fractured when his car overturned.

In the hospital he gave the name of Jerry Kral. But Sheriff Fred J. Cutler had seen Winkler's pictures.

He told Gus it was useless to bluff, that his fingerprints had been identified. The ruse worked. Winkler admitted his identity.

Police of a dozen cities immediately sought to extradite him in efforts to clear up such crimes as the Chicago gang massacre, the killing of an officer in a $200,000 mail truck robbery in Toledo, a Detroit triple gang slaying and bank robberies from New Jersey to Wisconsin.

Meanwhile, Chicago's "secret six," investigators of crime-fighting businessmen, were on the job. One of their sleuths spent hours in the hospital with Winkler, finally wresting a confession that he knew about the stolen Lincoln bonds, although he denied the robbery.

Winkler went to Nebraska after his recovery. He was jailed, but released on a bond of $100,000. Then followed his offer to restore the bank loot in return for being granted immunity from prosecution.

tions, and while Democrats still were exulting over gains made their candidates and issues in county, municipal and other elections.

Ingalls, if elected, undoubtedly would win the designation of "boy governor."

This youthful aspirant to the highest office his state can offer, goes places by airplane, a fact which no doubt accounts for his gaining distinction early in life. He was 13 and a student at Yale when the World War came along. He enlisted as a machinist with Yale's aviation unit in 1917, and was assigned to the British Royal Air Force. As a result of several wild skirmishes over the fighting lines, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross of the British government. The decoration was brought to New York by the Prince of Wales who presented it personally.

The American government also conferred the Distinguished Service Medal upon him.

After the war, Ingalls kept on flying. He made a "non-stop" flight through Yale, the Harvard law school, and a political campaign to land in the Ohio Legislature as a member of the house. He was twice elected, and through his efforts, Ohio's model aeronautics code was passed by the Assembly. He also served as a member of the Taxation Committee.

In the middle of his second term, Ingalls resigned to accept appointment by President Hoover as Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

In that position he has continued to use the airplane, and has made frequent business trips to all parts of the United States and to the Canal Zone. However, he came to this city by auto, due to the night trip back.

Ingalls come of families and connections that have been potent in Ohio politics, and in business. One grandfather was Melvin E. Ingalls, former president of the Big Four Railroad. The other was Charles P. Taft, brother of William Howard Taft. A cousin, Hurlbut Taft, is editor-in-chief of the Cincinnati Times Star. A close friend of Ingalls is Dan R. Hanna, Jr., son of Mark A. Hanna, and publisher of the Cleveland News.

Ingalls is wealthy, and is active in other sports besides aviation. He lives in Chagrin Falls, near Cleveland. He married Louise Harkness, of the exclusive Standard Oil family of New York, and they have three daughters.

He expects to be a "flying candidate," explaining that the press of business at Washington will make it necessary for him to use a plane for trips to Ohio and back during the campaign.

While flying in the war, Ingalls, then a lieutenant, shot down several enemy planes, but the greatest havoc he helped create was when he and two British officers shot down a German kite balloon. Though their planes were struck by machine gun and anti-aircraft fire, they followed the balloon down from 3,500 to within 500 feet of the ground where it burst into flames. It set fire to three hangars.

Ingalls believes the airplane to be a potent factor in the country's defense, and holds that the Navy's airplane-carrying ships are the most powerful of the fighting machines.

He likes them because of the wide areas they can cover. They are valuable, he says, because of their high speed, which is multiplied by the additional cruising range of their broods of planes, the great bombing strength of the planes, and the comparative low cost of the entire outfit.

remain unchanged but that any reductions made after the plan is in operation, come from basic rates.

That surcharges be applied to lighterage charges.

That the $3 and $6 per car surcharges be changed to cents per net ton.

That the commission revise its order barring surcharges on less than carload freight on hauls up to 175 miles and fixing 1 cent per 100 pounds between 175 and 250 miles so this section may be expressed on the basis of first class rates.

The Railroad Credit Corporation, proposed to handle the fund, would be chartered in Delaware with a capital at the outset of $120.

Administrative offices would be located in Washington and it would be operated by 12 directors. Five directors would be chosen from the Eastern district; three from the Western and two from the Southern. One of the Eastern directors would be from New England. The twelfth would be elected "at large" and would be the president and have charge of the organization.

An indication that the plan might be put into effect without all carriers entering was seen in its concluding paragraph, which says "This plan shall become effective only when those who have assented thereto all agree that a sufficient number have assented to make it practically operative."

All railroads already in bankruptcy or which derive less than 50 per cent of their revenues from hauling freight would be barred from receiving any money. They would, however, retain funds derived from the surcharges. Water carriers and such lines as might not be able to meet fixed charges even with a loan from the corporation also would be omitted.

BOARD MUST NAME NEW SCHOOL HEAD

Circleville, Nov. 18—(Spcl)—The county board of education is confronted with the task of naming a new superintendent of schools, to fill the vacancy caused by the naming of Supt. Milton S. Cox to the position of deputy prohibition commissioner of Ohio.

Cox has been head of the Pickaway schools since August 1, 1930, and prior to that was head of the Vinton county schools for eight years.

END PILES QUICK

No Salves—No Cutting
Your itching, bleeding, protruding piles will go when you actually remove the cause—bad blood circulation in the weak, flabby parts—and not one minute before. Salves or cutting can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID, prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, drives out congested blood, heals and restores the almost dead parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record right in this city, that Finley's Corner Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile agony or money back.—Adv.

Russia in Transition

An American Newspaperman Sees Russia As It is Today

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT

(Copyright by St. Louis Post-Dispatch and Distributed by Central Press.)

Moscow, U. S. S. R., Nov. 19.—To be certain of getting adequate food in Russia the traveler should carry his own supplies, especially if he intends to stay any length of time or to make a tour of the country. Soviet economy and the facilities of the State Tourist Agency have not yet advanced far enough to provide the visiting foreigner with satisfying western meals.

Fair food is easily obtainable in Moscow, Leningrad and Rostov. In the provinces, unless one travels under the auspices of the State Tourist Agency, one can't be certain of anything except tea, black bread, fish, cabbage and cucumbers. The Tourist Agency gives its clients plenty of bulk but not much variety.

Tourists are allowed to bring in duty free supplies for their personal use. These should by all means include plenty of canned fruits and meats, a thermos bottle, a small alcohol stove and powdered coffee or cocoa. The writer's most closely guarded food was a 10-pound tin of powdered malted milk, the gift of a travel-wise colleague in Berlin.

Meat and Fish a Problem
Foreigners are usually housed in one of four Moscow hotels, the Grand, the Savoy, the Europa and the Metropole. Breakfast, consisting of eggs, a fruit compote, tea and white bread and butter, must be taken at the hotel. The compote should be carefully inspected for worms. For other meals the experienced tourist goes to the Metropole, unless traveling under the Tourist Agency, in which case he usually is sent to the Grand for specially prepared group meals. Even at the Metropole the diners occasionally bring their own canned goods to the table to supplement the regular menu.

One of the first things a tourist learns about eating in Russia is that a cutlet is not a western cutlet but is ground up meat. If one is suspicious of sausage in the United States one won't be any too pleased with the Russian variety. Another thing quickly learned is that one portion of almost any dish will serve two persons.

The large hotel restaurants throughout Russia naturally specialize in caviar, both fresh and pressed, but fish itself presents a problem for the tourist. He must decide for himself how much faith he can put in the Russian refrigerating facilities.

The lack of drinking water throughout the Union is a much more serious problem. In the large cities two excellent mineral waters are obtainable. Narzan and Borzhom, either of which will compare favorably with American or European waters. Both are expensive—the writer averaged $3 a day for water in Moscow until he learned that Narzan could be bought more reasonably at the store for foreigners—and in many cities unobtainable.

Train travelers are somewhat protected by the station "kipytoks," tanks of boiling or boiled water, but these are not in working order every place. There is also danger of being told that water has been boiled when it has not.

The consequence is apt to be considerable discomfort for a week.

GOOD WATER A SCARCITY

Russian substitutes for water leave much to be desired. Russian beer is flat and is rarely cold. Citro, a sweet synthetic lemonade, will not quench thirst. Wines are expensive and not always obtainable. Vodka is like dynamite—one needs experience to handle it. The Russians are strong for kvass, a slightly alcoholic sweet beverage made with black bread. In the Ural regions the natives drink koumiss, fermented mare's milk, which tastes like very strong buttermilk. It is said to be good for anemia but most Americans would have to be fairly well gone to be able to make a steady drink of it. In the long run the best substitute is tea, which is obtainable in all restaurants and on most trains.

In traveling about Russia it would be possible but difficult to "live off the country." The buffets at the railroad stations usually have tea, black bread, boiled cabbage and fish on sale for those who can show railroad tickets, and at the small stations the peasants meet the train with berries, melons, eggs, rye bread, cottage cheese, milk and—very rarely—whole baked chickens. All these are not available at one station but several items usually are.

Prices for these foods are exorbitant if the rouble is figured at par. When white bread was available it cost a rouble—50 cents—for a small roll. A handful of wild raspberries cost a rouble and a watermelon, the size of a honey dew, cost two roubles. Eggs, raw or hard boiled cost about 15 cents each. At Samara the writer and guide paid a rouble for three raw eggs at the local market for immediate consumption without salt. One was bad but there was no replacement or refund. On the Black Sea boat peaches were offered at what amounted to a dollar a pound. Two portions of butter at a Baku hotel cost 2.50 roubles but it was real butter.

HIGH COST OF FOOD

At Tiflis a Russian recommended a small place as "the best restaurant in town." We tried it hoping to get a real plate of shashlik, a lamb dish for which Georgia is famous. For two portions the charge was 13 roubles—$6.50. In the states the meals would cost $1 at the most. When protests were made, the waiter explained that the restaurant was a private concern and that taxes were enormous. The place, a cellar, smelled to high heaven.

Tourists traveling under the State Tourist Agency have specially prepared meals wherever they go. The general food situation was so undesirable that the writer joined with the agency clients wherever possible for meals. While there was plenty of pressed caviar at breakfast and lunch the other food ran pretty heavily to omelettes, veal, macaroni and boiled potatoes—a fair diet for a short trip but apt to become tiresome if continued.

Foreigners living in Russia talk about food a great deal and have trouble in getting what they want. Many have tourist friends bring in canned goods, and others apparently have a diplomatic pipeline. The American women can do wonders with these raw materials and the results are excellent—for Russia.

The government and the State Tourist Agency are trying to attract more tourists to Russia by improving conditions. The best cooks and waiters in Moscow were recruited for the Metropole hotel. The Savoy and the Grand give weekly dances that last far into the morning. The Metropole has a resplendent gypsy choir several times a week.

In a Russian Bar

The Metropole has the edge on the other hotels on two counts—its comparatively good food and its new bar, which is to the Moscow foreign element what the Ritz Bar is to Berlin and the Ritz Bar to Paris. The place has been given a specious British air by the presence of three well-dressed women—perhaps the best dressed Russians in Moscow—behind the bar. One is a blonde, another is a brunette and the third is red-haired. Only occasionally do they mix drinks, and then only the simplest. Their job is to talk to the customers. The bartender, who probably was selected because of his linguistic rather than mixing ability, scorns a cocktail shaker and stirs up his concoctions in a glass.

The bar offers a wide range of choices, including the best foreign liquors and liqueurs, at reasonable prices. Whisky is 35 cents a drink, with soda 55 cents. Bronx and Manhattan cocktails fetch 35 cents and champagne cocktails 70 cents. To the American it is ironically amusing that ice cream sodas also cost 70 cents.

ONE FAYETTE MAN IS GIVEN PAROLE

Among ninety prisoners granted paroles from the Ohio Penitentiary by the Board of Paroles, appears the name of Eben Thomas, Paint township farmer, who was sentenced to the prison for manufacturing liquor, a year or more ago, who is to be released on parole November 20.

Thomas was arrested after a still and liquor were found on his premises, tried, found guilty, and given a one to seven year term.

"That bill has been paid . . . here is the cancelled check—"

IT is a mighty comforting feeling to be able to produce an endorsed cancelled check whenever a creditor has kept accounts incorrectly. Most people do not carefully preserve receipts for bills they have paid, but cancelled checks received from the bank at periodic intervals are easily laid away and always immediately available as a complete record of obligations that have been discharged.

Why not come to this bank . . . next pay day . . . and begin to handle your money in this safe, systematic way? A checking account with us assures a receipt, keeps your money safely, provides a record of expenditures and greatly adds to your prestige.

Showmanship on the Seas

It is not quality but size that counts these days, it seems. Each succeeding skyscraper must be taller than the rest, dirigibles and airplanes must surpass their predecessors in size, hotels advertise the greatest number of rooms and automobiles boast of the longest wheelbase. Among the first to catch the fever were the ocean steamship companies, which for years have been trying to outdo each other in building super liners.

Executives of the recently merged American ocean steamship lines rubbed the fur the right way, setting every American purring with pride, when they painted extravagant pictures of giant liners flying the Stars and Stripes, which they promise will be second to none on the seven seas.

All of this is comforting to national pride. Every country likes to be first in everything. But is it good business—sound investment?

Yankee ships should carry their share of the transatlantic passengers, but is it not more essential that they capture a larger share of the ocean freight traffic? The freight steamer is the backbone of any merchant marine; the gaudy super liner merely the window dressing.

Whether the American flag shall again ride the seven seas will depend not upon the construction of floating palaces but upon how many freighters are launched from Yankee shipyards.

Ritchie and Roosevelt

Two months ago nomination of Governor Roosevelt for the presidency by the Democratic convention next June seemed inevitable. For a time it seemed that here was to be one boom which had bloomed in the spring that was going to bear fruit. Today it is in grave danger of going to seed.

At present the long shot that is gaining rapidly upon the favorite at the second turn is Governor Ritchie, of Maryland. Both he and his backers have shown creditable restraint while other candidacies have been booming and are only now coming to the fore because of a slump in the Roosevelt boom.

Maryland's chief executive is being presented by the stop-Roosevelt elements in the Democratic party as the most available man to concentrate on.

Ritchie may not be the man to whom the finger of fate seems to point as being perhaps to move to the white house that Bernard Baruch says he is, but he is tearing great holes in the Roosevelt line and paving the way for an old-fashioned fight in the Democratic convention next year and perhaps the nomination of a western man. Ritchie may divide the east.

Weather

All seem to agree that adverse climatic conditions are needed if a race is to progress and prosper. Idyllic weather the year round is no incentive to hard labor. But there is a golden mean between Arctic energy and equatorial languor. Local weather standards meet well the ideal.

Wintry weather itself is no great help. The chief virtue in it is that men need to prepare for it by laying up food reserves and building stout homes, thus cultivating forethought and thrift. Not its onslaught but the expectation of it is the incentive to progress, and for that reason this community is often blessed. It is warned, again and again, that a freeze-out is due or that winds of high velocity are headed this way and is thus kept under pressure. And then, again and again, the storm takes a detour.

So does the populace have the benefit of incentives that are deemed indispensable to material and moral prosperity and at the same time is excused from enduring the burden of winter's stormy raging. The often mentioned old-fashioned winter is a sort of Santa Claus who never really comes, but in whom everyone believes to his great advancement.

Storms guilty of breach of promise put coal in the cellar, anti-freeze solution in the radiator, winter clothing in the closet and money in the pockets of the coal dealer, garage man and clothier.

FIND GRANDI IS POPULAR IN UNITED STATES

Official Fears Happily Prove Groundless. Comes with Happy Idea That Other Countries Have Rights

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, Nov. 19.—Just how serious were the threats of danger to which Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy was exposed during his visit in Washington probably never will be known to the general public.

The state department unquestionably was in a fever of anxiety throughout the entire period of his stay, but whether this worry was on general principles or because of actually plotted violence has not been disclosed, nor is it likely to be.

That the plan to bring Premier Mussolini's emissary and his party to Washington by plane from New York harbor was with a view to lessening the possibilities of trouble on the way is tacitly admitted.

As a state department official remarked, in issuing the news of the arrangement for the aerial trip, "Reading between the lines this announcement may fairly be interpreted as of the highest importance."

The aviation arrangement having been upset by unfavorable weather precautions adopted for the visitor's protection were on a scale unprecedented in the history of previous entertainments even for royalties in the capital. What were described as military honors obviously had a deeper meaning in Signor Grandi's instance than mere show.

It is true that the state department did have more, however, than the peril of an attack involving danger to the visitor's life with which to reckon.

A well-aimed egg, for example, would have been nearly as bad from a diplomatic point of view, as a bomb.

Anyway, the merest venture into the Italian guest's vicinity while here was an enterprise involving some little risk of rough handling by secret service guards unless undertaken with adequate credentials and with due deliberation to give time for various challenges and explanations.

Curiously, despite the fact that the Grandi visit obviously was regarded, and properly so, as attended by far greater prospects of untoward developments than the recent visit of Premier Pierre Laval of France, the Italian minister nevertheless met with a much more cordial popular reception than the French premier.

M. Laval, if he aroused no indications of enmity, on the other hand created no enthusiasm.

Signor Grandi, except by those who were presumably not actively hostile to him, seemed to be accepted as a friend with claims to a more than ordinarily warm welcome.

Poetry For Today

STRANGER VIEWS OHIO
 Ohio there is a king's wish in your borders—
 Mines, and forest, and fertile fields,
 Cattle, and corn, and sinews of trade.

Ohio, there is a sage's dream in your borders—
 Schools and universities for your children's children,
 Harvest of tolerance and sagacity in your people's eyes.

Ohio, there is an historian's heritage in your borders—
 You sire of statesmen, you parent of presidents,
 You scene of our nation's wars from Indian on wards.

Ohio, there is a country's security in your borders—
 With bounty of nature in your plains and hills,
 With bounty of industry and leadership in your daughters and sons.

—Margaret Williams, Tucson, Ariz.

come.
 Doubtless, the contract in the personalities of the two men partly accounted for the difference.
 M. Laval was colorless.
 Signor Grandi has "it."

Mr. Laval spoke virtually not a word of English. Signor Grandi is tolerably fluent. He never strayed far from an interpreter, and occasionally was stuck for a word, but could, in a pinch, have done fairly well alone. He is, in fact, not necessarily an abler, but a quicker-witted individual than the Frenchman.

About medium size—a trifle shorter than Secretary of State Stimson—rather thick set, with a fatted face peering out from behind his black beard, Signor Grandi is the gesticulatory type of Latin.

Aside from the man himself, either he or Premier Mussolini contrived somehow in advance to give an impression of better will toward the United States than M. Laval managed to convey.

M. Laval was here quite openly to drive as good a bargain as he could for France.

It may seem difficult to imagine in connection with a representative of the hard-boiled Mussolini, but Signor Grandi suggested some atmosphere if not of altruism at least of recognition that other countries as well as Italy have rights and a disposition to give due weight to them.

Notably his attitude toward Germany was sympathetic.

His views, in brief, appeared broader and less provincial than the French premier's.

The Laval visit was a matter of cold politeness, the Grandi visit friendly.

High Spots In Ohio History

BY J. H. GALBRAITH

The village of Jeromesville in Ashland county stands on the site of an Indian village established by about 200 Mohican Indians, partly civilized, who under the leadership of John Mohican, a chief, moved from eastern Connecticut and established themselves there. The Mohicans were the last of the Indian tribes originally inhabiting that territory to leave New England. Dwindling rapidly under the influence of the surrounding white civilization which they absorbed reluctantly, they virtually disappeared as a tribe from Connecticut when in 1762 Chief John Mohican led this remnant to the Jerome fork of the Mohican creek.

The fact that these Indians erected rude timber and bark huts instead of skin tents, and were evidently permanently established, attracted a number of white people to live with them or near them, and at the time of the war of 1812 this was the only settlement within Ashland county. For safety a number of white families came to the village at this time and a high log picket fence was constructed about it.

Among the white members of the village was a French trader named John Baptiste Jerome, who had come as a trader among the Indians when he was but 17 years old. He spoke the Indian language well and was a valuable scout for General Wayne. He was present at the battle of Fallen Timbers, and often told of the bewilderment of the Indians by the swift action of Wayne in the attack.

Jerome had married an Indian wife, but when the remnant of the Mohicans withdrew from the village she went with them, and Jerome later married a German woman. He gave his name to the village and the creek on which it was located, while the main stream bears the name of the tribe. Jerome himself lived later at the mouth of the Huron river where he died. His bones probably rest in an unknown grave near that place.

A NEW YORKER AT LARGE

By WILLIAM GAINES

NEW YORK—Wolstan Crocker Brown, exponent of "dynamic rhythm" with a record as an amateur fighter, asked me to come up to Grace Christie's dance studio the other night to look at his middle-weight pupil, soon to make his ring debut.

Wolstan Crocker (of one of the distinguished branches of the Browns) started punching the sides of his crib in Passaic, across the Hudson.

He kept up his punching with paralyzing effect through school and college days and his adventuring in Canada and Alaska.

His hair is graying at the temples, but the steel-like quality of his muscles hasn't gone rusty. And say, mister, them muscles got rhythm!

Brown's athletic ideal always has been the ancient Greek. Finding the late Florence Fleming Noyes achieving amazing results with her students of rhythmic dancing, and knowing what the coordination of mind and movement means to an athlete, Brown mapped his life work.

His would be the endeavor to evolve a method of rhythmic training applicable to men and women in all walks of life.

Enlarging his study of psychology and delving into the mysteries of what is called the sub-conscious mind, he has written a book and is writing another, explaining his theories in his own terms.

For our purposes here, it is sufficient to say that the aim of his "dynamic rhythm" is to attune the individual to life, as an orchestral instrument is tuned for the symphony.

For the application of these theories has resulted in fine works of art, but art always is subject to controversy.

LOOSENS TIGHT HACKING COUGHS IN A HURRY

Magic Relief—Or Money Back

Take a teaspoonful of Broncholine Emulsion. You may not be enthusiastic about the taste and smell of it, but what of it? So long as it helps your cough?

And it does! No doubt about it. Two doses often kills a cough. A whole bottle certainly does, or you can have your money back. Finley's Corner Drug Store and all other good druggists guarantee it.

You need not be afraid to take Broncholine. It contains no chloroform, no narcotics, no sedatives of any kind. Nothing to upset your stomach, nothing to give you the drug habit. Your own doctor would heartily recommend the formula.

You've no time to waste with a cough like that. Let Broncholine kill it—AT ONCE.—Adv.

PROOF IN PUNCH

"Why am I training a fighter?" Brown explains: "Well, in the first place, I like boxing as a sport."

"But the main reason is, if I can produce a champion batter thru dynamic rhythm, that will be an invaluable step in convincing men that rhythm is not just simply something for girls flitting about in gauzy costumes."

"The application of these theories has resulted in fine works of art, but art always is subject to controversy."

"Heard in Slam," Mrs. Regina Staudus said in part that the hardest thing missionaries have to combat in Slam is Buddhism. In the midst of this idolatry stands the Boon Memorial Institute, built and dedicated to the young manhood of Bangkok by the American Presbyterian Missions in the early years of the present century. The Institute was built in honor of an outstanding Siamese Christian whose influence still lives in Slam.

Mrs. James Crawford made a very entertaining and descriptive talk on her visit to the far north Alaska—this summer, which proved a most enjoyable feature of the program.

Mite boxes were collected at this meeting and added a most gratifying sum to the treasury. Appropriate to the annual mite box opening, an amusing playlet, "The Mighty Box," was presented by Mrs. George Gosard, Mrs. Jess Thompson, Mrs. Charles Stewardson, Mrs. Omar Schwartz, Mrs. Frank McCreight and Mrs. Roy Blake. The parts were cleverly taken.

Benediction closed a meeting of memorable interest and pleasure.

Paying their forfeit to the American Legion members, who were victorious in the membership drive waged between the two organizations, the Auxiliary entertained with a covered dish supper at Memorial Hall, Wednesday evening. It was a delightful social affair, bringing together nearly a hundred and fifty members of the Legion and Auxiliary and will be recorded with red-lettered interest and pleasure. A number of suppers have brought the two organizations together on frequent occasions, but never has the supper been so bountiful or the attendant pleasure so spontaneous. Added interest was taken in the presence of David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy in charge of Aeronautics, who was a visitor in the city and was invited as guest of honor for the supper.

A profusion of garden flowers from the members' gardens were employed in the table decorations, hardy chrysanthemums outstanding. One long table was heaped with a wide variety of home-cooked viands and the supper served cafeteria fashion. Ten long tables were arranged about the big hall to seat the guests, each bright with flowers, and the supper hour was prolonged in its congeniality.

Mr. Inralls was a most personable guest of honor and made a friendly little talk on general topics of interest during the supper hour.

The supper committee included Mrs. W. B. Hyer, general chairman, Mrs. Perce Pearce and Mrs. Mary-on Mark, with the entire Auxiliary assisting in the preparations.

Mrs. Albert S. Stemler was hostess for a delightful little party, Wednesday afternoon, assembling four tables of bridge for a most pleasurable afternoon. Fall flowers were used in decoration of the living rooms, chrysanthemums outstanding.

The afternoon's progressive bridge game progressed with interest and gaiety and at its close favors were awarded to Mrs. Milton H. Katz and Mrs. Robert Heath. Mrs. Stemler was assisted in serving a very delicious collation by Mrs. G. W. Inskeep and Mrs. Edward L. Fush.

Included in the charming little affair were Mrs. Milton Katz, Mrs. Edgar Snyder, Mrs. Robert Edgo, Mrs. James Summers, Miss Marie Melvin, Mrs. Robert Heath, Mrs. Ed Dice, Mrs. Kerns Thompson, Miss Ruth Carr, Mrs. Edward L. Bush, Mrs. G. W. Inskeep, Mrs. Tom Maddox, Mrs. Henry Sparks, Mrs. Edgar Coll, Mrs. Warren Schleich, Mrs. Loren D. Hynes.

The Selden Grange held a most interesting meeting Tuesday evening, with Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Sollars extending the hospitalities most cordially.

Mr. Ralph Nisley, Worthy Master, was in the chair. During the business session Mrs. Frank C. Miller of the Bogus road, was elected to membership.

The annual election put in office Maurice Sollars, Worthy Master, Jean Nisley, Overseer, Mrs. Dora C. Mark, Steward, Walter Sollars, Chaplain, Mrs. Elsie Nisley, Gate Keeper, Jobe Burris, Assistant Steward, Harold C. Mark, Lady Assistant Steward, Mrs. Juanita Nisley, Secretary, Cary C. Deer, Treasurer, Mrs. Alma Deer, Ceres, Ruth Nisley, Pomona, Georgiana Mark, Flora Virginia Sollars.

The members responded to roll call with quotations from the ritual. Betty Nisley gave a Thanksgiving reading and there was an oral contest of questions and answers.

The hostess served appetizing refreshments and there was a most enjoyable social hour, before the members adjourned to meet with Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Deer December the fifteenth.

Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Binegar were guests.

The Washington Country Club will sponsor a Thanksgiving dance for club members Wednesday night, November the twenty-sixth—the dance starting at nine o'clock. Miller's Harmony Five will furnish the music, this orchestra constantly growing in popularity. The committee has not yet decided upon the serving, but whether supper or a midnight lunch will be announced later.

Mrs. Edward R. Hunt is chairman, and will be assisted by the other members of the social committee, Mrs. Howard S. Harper, Mrs. Selby P. Gerstner, Mrs. Daniel Howard Davis, Mrs. Ormond Dewey, Mrs. R. Owen Harrison.

The regular meeting of the Ladies Aid Society was held in the parlors of the Church of Christ, Wednesday afternoon, and was unusually well attended. Mrs. Lon Mark, president, conducted the devotionals and during the business session closed the old business for the year.

The new officers were installed with impressive services. Mrs. Ursula Thornhill is president, Mrs. J. A. Lauderman, vice president, Mrs. Lottie Dews, secretary, and Mrs. W. P. Robinson, treasurer. Mrs. Thornhill took the chair and launched plans for the new year. A turkey supper was planned for the first Friday in December.

The business occupied the entire afternoon.

Thirty-five members of the Good Hope W.C.T.U. enjoyed the cordially extended hospitality of Mrs. John King, Wednesday afternoon, for the regular meeting. Miss Lorie King and Mrs. Bruce King were the assisting hostesses.

Mrs. John York, president, conducted the brief business session. Mrs. Ralph Braden the devotionals and Mrs. Washington Lough the program.

Miss Lorie King opened the program with a lovely piano solo and accompanied Miss Mozella Taylor in a pretty vocal solo. Papers on prohibition were read by Miss Frances Williams, Mrs. J. F. Wilson and Mrs. Emma Leska. Mrs. Bruce King and Mrs. Glenn Thornton contributed a vocal solo to the entertainment.

The trio of hostesses provided a very delightful social hour and served delicious refreshments.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Braden near Chornley's.

Mrs. W. M. Archer was hostess to the Mt. Olive Missionary Society Wednesday afternoon for its November meeting. Mrs. Gail Rayburn was devotional leader and Mrs. Emma Engle, president, conducted the business session.

The program included two interesting papers, "What is Stewardship?" by Miss Florence Olinger, and "God's Day and God's Do!" by Mrs. Zoe Engle, and the question box conducted by Mrs. Nellie Warnecke. Several visitors were assembled with the members.

The society made a donation to Rev. and Mrs. Archer and presented them with an array of useful gifts.

Rev. Archer closed the meeting with prayer, a social hour following.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Seeley motored up from Asheville, N. C., Wednesday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Willard S. Willis.

ELKS' INITIATION HELD AT CLUB ROOM WITH CEREMONIES

Seventy-five Elks assembled at the R.P.O.E. club room Wednesday evening for initiation and to hear an able address by District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler, R.P.O.E., C. E. Leiber, of Piqua. There were members of the order in attendance from Dayton, Springfield, Wilmington, Xenia, Greenfield and Sabina.

J. J. Kelley, exalted ruler, and his corps of efficient officers, conducted the initiation. The candidates were Emory Maddox, of Springfield, and George Revelis, of this city.

The address of the Deputy Grand Exalted ruler held the large body in absorbed attention and brought to it added realization of the inspiring principles of the order and the good that has resulted from such a foundation.

Walter Shoop, of Sabina, a genius with the accordion, added to the enjoyment of the evening in numbers strenuously applauded.

Appetizing refreshments were served under the direction of D. H. Barchet, George Sunkel and Chalmers Kelley.

DINNER HONORS DEPUTY

Ireland have been staying with him, and his mother, Mrs. J. W. Hughey most of the time. Mrs. S. A. Murry visited him Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Renick returned Thursday evening from Hot Springs, Ark., where they spent the past five weeks. Both Mr. and Mrs. Renick returned much benefited in health.

MAKES YOU LOSE UNHEALTHY FAT
Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lose fat too."

To take off fat—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—an 85 cent bottle lasts 4 weeks—Get it at Finley's Corner Drug Store or any drug store in America. If this bottle fails to convince you this is the easiest, surest and safest way to lose fat your money gladly returned.—Adv.

LIVING AND LOVING

BY VIRGINIA LEE

I WONDER whether you remember the letter from a woman who signed herself "Poison Ivy," because that was what she seemed to have become to her husband. She suspected another woman had come into her husband's life and wondered whether she was going to bear his indifference to herself and get back "the old loving pal he once was."

The following letter is from a woman who has passed through the same experience and writes a word of comfort.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: May I not help 'Poison Ivy' with just a few words of comfort?"

"My dear, don't let your spirits sag and give up. The only difference in our cases is that I have been married almost double your years and am the mother of many children, and yet am only five years older than you."

"I have passed through many such experiences as you have related, but while I have been seemingly completely submerged, yet I came back, squared my shoulders, lifted my chin a little higher and started fresh."

"Your husband wouldn't stay if he didn't care for you, as there are no 'baby hands' to hold him. 'Treat the whole thing as a joke. Pretend a new interest; make yourself be cheerful and happy, or at least appear so, even though your heart feels like lead. Form new friendships, do fancy work, read books and, above all, appear unconcerned about his movements. Never question him."

"After a time he will feel you have ceased to care and see how quickly he'll change. Always have his meals on time, his clothes in apple pie order, but, aside from that, assume perfect indifference."

"Cut out your self sympathy. It has a most deteriorating effect and undermines your whole nature. I know, because I have had many a siege and never gained by it."

"Double your efforts to become more attractive, and if you know any of your adversary's charms, adopt a few of them in a quiet, subtle way, and watch the results. They like us as we are, even though they have a 'darned poor way' of showing it. Try this recipe."

"ONE WHO KNOWS."

Thank you very much for your wise counsel. It is much like the advice I gave "Poison Ivy," but has the value of being from One Who Knows.

Dear Diary.

Story of a Girl who went to New York for Fame and Fortune.
By ETHELDA BEDFORD
RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.

FRIDAY NIGHT.

DEAR DIARY: Paul said he wanted to tell me about the kind of love that grows into marriage, but isn't the kind of love that movies are made of—

I said: "Perhaps, Paul, because you are in the movie business you've been taking it too seriously and because your own life isn't like one of those movie stories you think it needs rearranging."

"And with a new leading lady?" he put in, and he smiled, Diary, so I know he wasn't offended.

"If I had met you ten years ago and you were as you are now I should have made you love me," he said to me.

"Would you, really?"

"Yes—I believe a man can do that when he feels about any one as I do about you."

I thought: "I wish a girl could do that when she feels about any one as I do about Nate."

But I said: "If you weren't terribly in love, Paul—why, how could you marry?"

He smiled over at me as if he thought I were really distressingly young and inexperienced.

His smile sort of assured me he could explain. And I was ever so interested.

"We," he said, and that was the first time he referred directly to his wife, "were in high school together—and then when I went away to college it was understood we were to be married when I finished. . . . And so—"

"And so you went right through, according to schedule?" I laughed a little as I found the right words so easily and he seemed to struggle to take it so lightly. But I felt it's serious. . . . what I mean is there was no romance. . . . and I wanted romance. . . . although then I didn't know what I wanted."

"Romance. . . . I think I know what you mean. . . ."

I was thinking of Dan, Diary,

NEW YORK MAYOR
PLEADS FOR MONEY

New York, Nov. 19.—(P)—The mayor of New York will plead before the governor of California next Wednesday for the freedom of Tom Mooney, fifteen years a prisoner at San Quentin.

A telegram yesterday from "Bother Mooney" that brought tears to Mayor "Jimmy" Walker's eyes was the final plea that moved him to offer his services in behalf of the labor leader who once was sentenced to death and who now is serving a life sentence.

Mooney was convicted in connection with the Preparedness Day parade bombing in San Francisco July 26, 1916.

TOO MANY FARMS
LATEST DIAGNOSIS

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(P)—Chairman James C. Stone, of the Federal Farm Board, expressed the belief today there was too much land in agricultural use.

A participant in the land utilization conference called by Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, the farm head said land planning "must include provisions for reducing the total area of land in farms, or else for shifting some of it to less productive use, as from crops to pastures."

Utilization of waste lands and conservation of soil was the keynote of the conference.

SURF BOARD RIDER
CONQUERS CHANNEL;
WAVES RASP FEET

Folkstone, England.—(P)—The English channel has been crossed in an even dozen ways, now that a young Frenchman Roger Tronquet, has surfboarded across.

Up to the time Tronquet did his water toboggan act, the channel had been crossed by balloon, hydro-marine, punt, canoe, glider, 11 ft dinghy, water skis and the ordinary channel steamer.

Tronquet's feet were bleeding from the constant wash of water across the board when he arrived here. It took about seven hours to make the crossing.

His only reason was that no one else had tried it.

'Family Groups' Planned
For Freshmen Co-Eds

St. Louis.—(P)—Freshmen women at Washington university will be orientated this year under a new "family group" plan.

Combining features of several systems used in other American universities, the plan divides freshmen co-eds into groups of 15 or 20 each meeting once a week for six weeks under the leadership of a junior or senior woman.

Scholarship, university traditions and history, extra-curricular activities, including athletics, and school publications are taken up under a definite program.

Aspiring Musicians Take Their Lessons By Radio

Detroit.—(P)—People who don't like to be seen carrying musical instruments are learning to play by radio in their own homes.

Following inquiry by a Michigan school superintendent as to the possibility of using radio as a course of radio instruction was offered.

The Michigan department of public instruction and the University of Michigan co-operated.

Free lesson booklets were distributed to adults and children in radio-equipped schools. The booklets gave written instructions to be followed during the broadcasts.

PART OF CEILING
TAKES A TUMBLE

The Summers and Buchanan music and shoe store in East Court street, was treated to a liberal shower of falling plaster, during Wednesday night, so that when the proprietors opened the store Thursday morning it was not a pleasant spectacle that greeted them.

A large section of ceiling had let go and crashed down among the radios and other instruments on display, showering the entire room with white dust, but fortunately not causing extensive damage to the instruments it struck.

LOVE TRIANGLE
TRAPS THREE IN VIOLENT DEATH

While Russell ran screaming to the police station, Wheeler raced away toward Cadiz, 25 miles away. A posse recruited by Sheriff Maurice Wooster of Harrison county turned him back, however. As he neared Dennison he found all roads heavily guarded, and rather than submit to arrest, determined upon suicide.

His body was found a mile and a half from town by night watchman A. J. Maxwell. He had removed a shoe and pressed the trigger of his shot gun with his toe, corner Lewis said.

Wheeler's suicide had been predicted by Mayor Robert H. Maxwell and came 15 years after a similar act by his father. The father, Isaac Wheeler, killed himself and his wife in Canton in 1916.

Tsitsihar, today were pursuing the retreating enemy toward Koku Shan Chen, 150 miles northeast of Tsitsihar, the Rengo correspondent at Harbin reported.

Neither the foreign or war office has made any announcement regarding the capture of Tsitsihar, although advices from Mukden said General Honjo's headquarters had confirmed reports that the Japanese entered the city this morning.

Apparently on the assumption that the Japanese were inside the city until it was assured.

Comment — Markets
Washington C. H.
Union Stock Yards

By THE MANAGER

CATTLE—Nothing is selling well at stock yards but few prime steers. Anything not eligible to outside competition is handicapped on this account. However, feeders are in stronger position than at the inception of last winter as prices are low, the investment smaller and sales resistance to the product is less. Any cattle weighing 1200 lbs. up are showing a profit, some of it substantial, but as stock steers went in light they will return to market that way.

The prospect is confusing and the outcome will depend entirely on winter industrial conditions. Swelling payrolls will increase meat consumption as the populace will satisfy its appetite when it has "the price," $12.50 to $15 per cwt. was the price paid for the best corn fed steers, that were sold at auction at the Omaha show sale recently. What the Chicago show sale in December will do must be left to conjecture. Chain stores are using generous quantities of low grade beef now, cut from steers costing $3 to $6 per cwt., representing $5 to $8 in the carcass on which the cutting profit over the retailer's counter is substantial.

Plenty of short fed cattle are in sight up to March.

HOGS—Scant prospect for substantial or permanent improvement in hog prices this side of January, if then. The obvious purpose of the packer is to put up droves between $4.50 and $5 per cwt., Chicago basis, current happenings indicating that they have the hog market in the hollow of their hands, and further, evidence of collusion between slaughtering interests being detected.

That tried and effective expedient of dumping hogs (directs), bought in the country, into the Chicago market in sufficient number to eliminate their competition, 30,000 on Monday and 10,000 on Tuesday being the number of these "directs" on the Chicago market this week. On the other hand, the country invariably increases loading in response to every advance, which insures constant selling pressure.

In face of all these facts, fresh pork loins are up $3 to $3.50 per cwt., and eight to fifteen pound loins are selling at $12 to $14 against $9 to $11 a fortnight ago, indicating broad fresh meat demand.

Viewed from any angle it is, and will be, a packer's market, and, running true to form, the big outfits may overplay their hands.

The inevitable sequence of these prices will be production curtailment.

SHEEP—Lamb market dominated by packers, who have driven their peg in the $6 hole. An advance of 50c will be possible on occasional short runs, but response from feeders will be prompt.

Approximately 3,500,000 went to the country from the ten leading markets since July of this year, and a considerable number of "contract" lambs have gone direct from western pastures to feed lots, preventing even an approximation of the number on feed, but leaving no doubt as to an adequate winter supply. All that can be said definitely about this class of live stock is that when this crop is fully cleaned up, desolation and ruin will be in its wake.

Cattle—Receipts, 30 head; top steers or heifers $5.70; good steers or heifers $5.50; medium steers or heifers $5.25; common steers or heifers $3.50@4; top cows $3.60; medium cows $3.25@3.60; top bulls $4.60; heavy and thin $3.50@3.70.

Hogs—Receipts, 1,000 head; top hogs $4.85; 90 to 120 lbs. $4.70; 120 to 150 lbs. $4.60@4.70; 150 to 180 lbs. $4.75; 180 to 210 lbs. $4.75@4.85; 210 to 240 lbs. $4.75@4.80; 240 lbs. and up $4.50@4.60; good sows $4.40; medium sows $3.75@3.90.

Sheep—Receipts, 175 head; top lambs $5.15; light lambs $5; medium lambs $4.30; thin lambs $3.40; buck (by the head) $6.50@7.50; ewes (by the head) $1@2.50.

MARKETS and
FINANCIAL NEWS

DAY'S ACTIVITIES
IN WALL STREET

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, Nov. 19.—(P)—Financial markets again struggled to their feet today, as yesterday's wave of selling appeared to have subsided.

Fresh selling had to be absorbed by the securities markets during the early trading, and some individual issues, in both stocks and bonds were depressed to new lows for the major bear market. Nevertheless, price averages indicate that roughly half of the extreme recovery from the Oct. 5 low is still retained.

Rails were heavy at the start, with the exception of New York Central, which showed isolated strength, eventually rising about 2 points, along with Santa Fe and Union Pacific. The last named sold off 2 to a new low since 1903, before turning upward. Atlantic Coast Line, a lightly traded issue, dropped 7 to a price of 50, on reduction of the dividend. By early afternoon, net gains of a point or two appeared in such issues as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Union Carbide and Eastman.

A better tone in commodities helped the security markets. Such adverse dividend news as appeared was so lacking in an element of surprise that it had little influence. Atlantic Coast Line reduced its semi-annual payment to $2 from $3.50. Omission by Chicago and Northern and reduction by Southern Pacific yesterday had been anticipated.

Railroad quarters were absorbed with rumors of possible developments from the conference of railroad executives and labor heads. Rumors in brokerage circles of a surprise voluntary reduction in wages may have prompted considerable short covering and contributed to the upturn in the carrier issues. On the whole, however, Wall street did not seem impressed with such gossip, and expected little or nothing in the way of immediate developments.

A bond offering of $12,000,000 for the Cincinnati Union Terminal Co., the first railroad offering in two months, aroused hopes of a restoration of a ready market for railway bonds, and for bonds generally, but in view of the fact that this issue has the backing of seven roads, including the leading eastern trunk lines, it could scarcely be regarded as a test of the market for ordinary carrier obligations.

Selling such as has recently poured into the stock market has aroused fresh discussion of the stock exchange's control of short selling. So far as can be learned, the exchange officials are maintaining about as rigid a control over the shorts as ever, but the short interest appears to have been considerably increased. This, of course, should strengthen the markets technical position, but may have contributed to the recent decline. Orders for short account must still be so designated as they go to the floor, and the exchange today ordered members to include odd lot transactions once more in their daily reports of short sales.

The money market showed a somewhat easier undertone, with outside call money offered at slight concessions from the official rate of 2 1/2 per cent.

GRAIN MARKET
NEWS SUMMARY

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(P)—Buyers on the part of recent speculative sellers gave impetus to a rise in wheat prices today, especially in the late dealings. One of the principal grain houses was also conspicuous in the purchasing, and took the ground that it was seldom the wheat market offered greater investment possibilities than at the present time. It was urged that current values were the sum and substance of a liquidated world.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1 1/4@1 1/2 cents above yesterday's finish, corn 3/4@1 1/4c up, oats 3/4@1c advanced, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Unconfirmed rumors that Russia had demanded Japan evacuate the Soviet railroad zone in Manchuria served at times to inspire considerable buying of wheat. Bullish effects of the rumors were heightened by comment from Washington, ascribed to official sources that the Manchurian situation should not be discussed at this time. Independent strength shown by the corn market did much also to stiffen quotations on all grains.

An outstanding feature was announcement that corn was being purchased in Chicago to be conveyed to Iowa, the leading corn producing state. Such a parallel to the proverbial paradox of shipping coals to Newcastle, attracted widespread attention. The reason given was that adequate supplies of corn could not be readily bought in Iowa owing partly to organized movements to hold corn back on farms and partly as a result of unusual demand for corn in drought districts north and west. Oats sympathized with corn strength.

Provisions tended upward with hog values.

OLD ILLIBUCK

NOT LIKELY TO MOVE

Trophy Now Hangs on Wall of Ohio Union After 1930 Victory

BUT BUCKS FACE JINX

Not in 13 Years Has Ohio Won on Home Field

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—The football game Saturday between Illinois and Ohio State will decide Illibuck's home for another year. Illibuck is a wooden turtle given to the winner of each Ohio-Illinois game.

It all began in 1924 when a men's honorary fraternity at Illinois requested an Ohio honorary to select a trophy to be given the winner.

A group of Ohio students searched a turtle found at a downtown fish store. It weighed 25 pounds and cost $15 and no end of trouble to get it to Champaign where the game was played that year.

However, the committee was relieved of a great responsibility when Illinois won the game. Illinois won again in 1925 and took Illibuck back home for the last time. Illibuck died that year.

Illinois replaced the dead turtle with a wooden reproduction and ever since he has been traveling back and forth between the two schools. Last year he returned here and now rests nonchalantly on a wall at Ohio Union. Illinois has the original turtle's shell which is given the losing team.

Ohio State University football players will be attempting something Saturday that their brothers for 13 preceding years could not accomplish—defeat Illinois on Ohio soil.

Not since 1917 have the Bucks triumphed over the Illini at home, and only four times have they been successful at Urbana, since that date. Rivalry between the two schools started back in 1902, with Illinois winning 11 times, Ohio State 6, and two games ending even.

Followers of Ohio State despite previous showings of both teams which would indicate a Buckeye victory, anticipate a battle from start to finish.

Coach Sam Willaman has drilled his charges in trick plays and formations and has been warning them daily against overconfidence.

Junior Ferrall, Canton, a junior end, leads his teammates in scoring this year. Ferrall tallied 12 points in the Cincinnati game and a similar number in the Navy game to bring his total to 24. All together, 12 men have crashed the scoring column for Ohio State this year, including four linemen.

WINNING PLAY

Frank Thomas, University of Alabama head coach, and Hillman Holley, flashy Crimson Tide half back, are shown above. Sketch shows in detail a reverse forward pass included in the Thomas repertoire of plays.

Frank Thomas, former backfield coach at the University of Georgia this year succeeded Wallace Wade as head coach at the University of Alabama. In this, the thirteenth of a series of football articles written by outstanding coaches themselves he describes one of the touchdown makers used at his old post.

By FRANK THOMAS
(Head Football Coach, University of Alabama)

Tuscaloosa, Ala. —(AP)—A reverse forward pass, Chandler to Maffett, provided the winning margin in Georgia's victory over its old rival, Georgia Tech, two years ago. The pass was for 30 yards over the goal line, and its completion gave the Bulldogs a touchdown and the long end of a 12 to 6 score.

The backfield was unbalanced to the left with No. 2 back in close to center; Dickens, No. 1 back, farther to the rear and directly behind center; No. 3 back stationed to the left of Dickens, and Chandler, No. 4 back, opposite left end.

The ball was passed to Dickens who started toward his left tackle.

AERIAL GAMER

IS PLANNED BY IRISH

Against Trojans Saturday and to This End New Tricks Developed

LINEMAN PULLED BACK

To Heave Pigskin on Long Shots Down Field

By PAUL MICKELSON

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Southern California's invading Trojans can expect a dazzling counter attack of forward passes Saturday when they storm the football citadel of old Notre Dame.

For years, the impression has prevailed in the camp of the South Bend raiders that the aerial attack is the chief ground gaining weapon against the Trojans and this year is no exception. Coach Hearty "Hunk" Anderson, bounteously equipped with tossers, expects to start throwing passes from the start of the battle.

Several new aerial plays have been given to the backfield men while considerable attention has been paid to a lineman named Ed Krause. Those who have watched Krause come out of the line in practice and heave the leather 60 to 75 yards predicted a rival even for the great "Brick" Muller of California fame.

Although Coach Anderson wore a worried expression as the game neared today, Notre Dame's hopes of repelling the Trojans invasion bounded upward. George Melinkovich, first string fullback who was injured during the Navy game, was back in uniform and will be ready Saturday.

Forward passes also received considerable attention around the Big Ten camps today as the rival eleven made final preparations for Saturday's important engagements. In almost every camp, the coaches were busily devising offensive or defensive plays for the aerial attack.

Northwestern's tired Wildcats appeared fit and ready again to carry on toward their Big Ten championship goal. One of the most spirited drills of the season was held last night in preparation for Iowa game, the last obstacle between the Wildcats and the title in regulation season's play.

Tony and the Kid Fight For Title

New York, Nov. 19.—(AP)—A real championship battle was in sight today as Tony Canzoneri and Kid Chocolate waited for their 15 round fight in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night which may see three titles go on the block.

Tony holds the synthetic junior welterweight crown as well as the lightweight title which is the real object of the battle and will risk the mob. In return it seems likely that he will get a chance at the junior lightweight championship which Chocolate won from Benny Bass a short time ago.

Canzoneri tipped the scales at 131½ pounds when he completed his hard work in preparation for the fight yesterday.

The New York Italian has been a slight favorite but as the time for the battle approaches public opinion seems to be swinging toward the Cuban "Keed".

CUB BOSSES AFTER DEALS

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The two master minds of the Chicago Cubs, President William L. Veeck and Manager Rogers Hornsby, opened their series of secret conferences today to discover ways and means of producing a National League pennant winner for 1932.

President Veeck made a tour of the east last week searching for deals and several were reported in the making. It was known that Ed Brandt, star Boston pitcher, was one of those sought to wear a Cub uniform.

SEVEN MEN AND 3 HORSES BARRED AT HAVRE DE GRACE FOR RUNNING IN "RINGER"

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 19.—(AP)—An investigation which began Oct. 3, when it was discovered that a "ringer" had run and won a race at Havre De Grace has resulted in the ruling off Maryland race tracks for life seven men and three horses. Among the seven was "Nigger Nate" Raymond, known as a gambler.

At Havre De Grace, a horse named Shem entered in a juvenile race but Aknahton, a three year old colt, ran under that name and won by a wide margin. The discovery of the substitution led to the drastic action by the Maryland Racing Commission.

In addition to Raymond, who the commission said figured in the fixing of the race under the name of A. Ray, those banned are: Herman Brackheimer, Leo Canerman, Patrick Christie, William Marino, in whose name "Shem" ran at Havre De Grace; Gladmar Sulick; and Julius Delott, who under the name of J. Lebolt ran "Aknahton" at Aqueduct, Sept. 17. The license of Arthur Kennedy trainer of the horse that ran as "Shem" was revoked because he accepted the horse without properly identifying the owner or the horse and because he saddled a three year old colt when the horse entered was a two year old gelding.

Three horses, Shem, Aknahton and Ep, which were shipped from New York together, were barred.

White Pheasant Shot by Hunter In Fayette Co.

A hunter near Jeffersonville

Wednesday afternoon killed a white pheasant which was placed on display in a place of business in Jeffersonville and attracted a great deal of attention.

The pheasant had been seen a number of times about the Frank Carr premises east of Jeffersonville.

With exception of the natural pheasant color under the wings, the bird was almost pure white.

The bird is believed to have been a cross between a pheasant and white Wyandotte chicken.

It is the second white pheasant killed in Ohio during the past few days.

The pheasant is on display at the DeLaRue and Miller market in Jeffersonville.

Three horses, Shem, Aknahton and Ep, which were shipped from New York together, were barred.

MAN MOUNTAIN NEXT FOE FOR KING LEVINSKY

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(AP)—King Levinsky, Chicago's fighting fish peddler, goes angling for the largest catch in boxing's big pool now by engaging the Man Mountain from Italy, Primo Carnera in the 10 round feature battle at the Chicago Stadium.

The struggle was one of the all to win and nothing to lose ventures for Levinsky, whose furious, unorthodox attack has made him one of the real trial horses of the ring.

Carnera, aided by a weight advantage of a mere 60 pounds or more, was a 3 to 1 favorite, although the king fish's friends were confident he would topple the big Italian with a knockout.

GAME PRESERVE TO BE KEPT BY STATE

Conservation Commission Considering Plans for Full Development

LIABILITY RELIEVED

Deer and Raccoon to Be Propagated There

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Having decided to retain the Roosevelt Game Preserve in Scioto county, the State Conservation council today was considering plans calling for full development of the project.

Conservation Commissioner W. H. Reinhart, after conferences with George White, Chambers of Commerce and Sportsmen's organizations, announced state would continue propagation of deer at the refuge and would formulate a definite program that might permit a short open season on the farm.

The conferences followed an inspection of the preserve by Reinhart and members of the council. A proposal that the preserve be abandoned was fought stubbornly by Southern Ohio Sportsmen and their views were submitted to Reinhart during his inspection trip.

Besides continuing deer propagation, Reinhart said the state would draw up plans for better protection of the preserve. He also said that coons may be bred on the refuge in accordance with his program for the establishment of a few large coon farms instead of numerous small ones. The council decided, however, to abandon propagation of wild turkeys on the ground because of their domestication.

Reinhart said that several Southern Ohio organizations had offered to assume liability in suits that might result from damage inflicted by deer on farms near the preserve. This, the commissioner pointed out, will relieve the state of much expense.

An open season on deer will be recommended to the next general assembly by the Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce, which indicated it would draft a bill providing for the payment of a license fee by the hunters.

SALARY CUTS FOR BASEBALL NOW PLANNED

A. A. TAKES LEAD IN MOVE FOR ECONOMY BY SETTING MINIMUM WAGE

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The opening shot of the long feared campaign to trim baseball salaries has been fired on the American Association front.

Taking the initiative in the movement, club owners of the American Association today considered one of the most drastic wage cuts in years. Several others, including the major leagues, were expected to follow suit in greater or lesser degrees.

Under the present American Association proposal, the maximum player salary would be limited to a maximum of $600 monthly. For years scores of former major leaguers roamed around the class AA league with salaries close to the ones they received for big time baseball.

Such a drastic wage reduction undoubtedly would end the playing days of major league cast-offs in short order as most of them refuse to continue in the game for much less than they received in the majors.

Thomas Jefferson Hickey still held the presidential seat of the American Association today, victor of another fight to oust him. When the balloting became a hopeless 4 to 4 deadlock after two days, the club owners voted unanimously to give him a one-year's contract as they did a year ago.

SPORT SLANTS

Commissioner Landis and I sat in a hotel room overlooking some of Manhattan's mid-town roofs. We talked about baseball and the depression.

"Now I'll tell you," said the judge, "I've played this game for 35 years and I can't figure it out."

"Sometimes the going is good and sometimes it isn't. A fellow who figures to be just an old man will go out there—the way Charley White did the other day—and, by golly, he won't miss a putt. Or any shot, for that matter. Judgment, timing, a steady hand and a good eye."

"And they you will take a strong young fellow, who ought to be supplied and swing easily and what will he do? I'll tell you, if you don't realize what you are doing yourself. He will slice all over the premises."

Did the judge think baseball had survived conditions pretty well, considering the circumstance of both 1931 pennant races being all over early in September?

"Now, take this example," he went on. "I've seen a good deal of this thing. About two years ago I finally got it under control. I grasped it, if you know what I mean. I broke 90 three times in succession. I stayed awake for a time the night after I scored an 86."

"Yes, it was all quite simple. I didn't know just why, but at last, after more than 30 years, I had caught the main idea. I could hardly wait to get out there again. I didn't wait until a Saturday or Sunday. No, I was right out on the first tee early the next day. I took exactly 110 shots at the ball for 18 holes."

Was there prospect of any general retrenchment for 1932 or would expansion be the program?

"I'm certain of one thing," the white-haired chieftain of baseball went on. "I can stop slicing by keeping my head down and my eyes on the spot from where I hit the ball. I mean, keeping on looking at that spot for a second or two after completing the shot."

"I will go so far as to say, sir, I cannot slice at all if I do that. Yet in my early days I was as consistent a slicer as anyone I ever saw. My ball would hit the ground and finish up its journey by traveling at right angles to the proper line of flight."

There was still an unsettled matter. Did the judge have any statement to make about the new ball. "The only time I ever seriously sought out a professional for sound golf advice was when I met Walter Hagen one winter in Florida. He invited me to play a round the 18 holes he made no comment on my game. It was just a game of golf for both of us."

"Afterward he said to me: 'There are some things about your golf that are too atrocious to mention. But there is nothing I can do for you. You have played too long to try any new styles.'

"No professional can help you beyond few minor points and you will enjoy the game no more because of any instruction. Go right ahead and don't pay any attention to other advice these fellows will try to hand you."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a sick, bad taste and your breath is foul. Skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

CHAPTER 33

LOIS thought for a moment that her eyes surely must be playing a trick on her. That it couldn't possibly be Bruce Durand who was standing over her. She felt a queer little catch in her throat. "Oh," she exclaimed. Then her mind began to function rapidly. How did he get in here? Where did he get her address? What was he thinking? He had seen her mother. He had seen the old davenport and chairs down stairs. He had taken her in a lie. "Here, take this chair and sit down and talk to Lois," Mrs. Corbin suggested. "Maybe she needs a little outside company." Then she vanished.

As soon as Bruce was sure that he was alone with Lois he leaped over close to her face. He was terribly embarrassed and yet he wanted to make a clean breast of everything, too. In a flood of words he told Lois everything. He confessed how he had fallen for Ariene's lies regarding her. How he could have been such a numbskull he said he did not know, but he guessed he was pretty glib. He did not tell Lois of his aunt and uncle coming back from Europe. No use worrying her with that now. Maybe he wouldn't even have to tell her. Something might happen so that everything would be fixed up without her knowing. But he did want her to understand that he was certainly all for her, no matter what occurred.

Bruce finished it all by begging Lois to forgive him. Lois was not so sure that she should. She knew that Ariene had been up to something, but she blamed Bruce because he took Ariene's word instead of asking her for the truth of things. It was easy for a young man to hurt a girl so much and then come around and ask to be forgiven.

Then Lois thought about her home and the lie she had told Bruce concerning that. "I'm sorry," she said, "that I lied about my family. It was because I wanted to impress you. I suppose I knew your people were wealthy and I was afraid."

She turned away from him. Bruce pressed her hand tenderly. "That doesn't make any difference, dear, honestly it doesn't. Forget it, will you? Gee, just think of all that I have to make up to you. I've made you unhappy, and ill—" His voice trailed off weakly, miserably.

There is something about seeing a girl ill that causes a young man to believe she is the next thing to death. That is the way Bruce felt now as he sat there beside Lois looking down at her pale cheeks. He felt more sorry than ever now that she was ill. He felt that it was all his fault, and a good part of it was.

"Lois," he said, his eyes fairly begging her, "I can't be happy without you. Say you'll forgive me. Let's start all over again. I've learned my lesson now, and so have you. We'll both know now to trust and believe each other in spite of everything. Nothing can separate us now."

Lois was suddenly well. She wanted to rise, to put her arms around Bruce and have him hold her close to him. She didn't want to ever let him leave her. It was terrible to love anybody as much as Lois Corbin loved Bruce Durand. Margaret had told her as much several times. But what could one do? One couldn't help it. Because one was born, could she? Nor one couldn't help it because she loved someone. It was the same thing. Margaret merely didn't understand—she never had loved anyone. "Of course, I'll forgive you," Lois whispered. "I couldn't help it even if I tried and I'm not going to try. I've been too lonely without you. I suppose I'm forgiving you selfishly after all. I'm sure it's because I feel sorry for myself and not for you."

Bruce laughed. He was squeezing her hand so hard that it hurt her. "Say," she said, "would you mind releasing my hand just a little? I'm sick you know. And, besides, that hurts!"

Bruce lifted it up and kissed it. "I've got something for this finger," he said separating the fourth finger from the others. "Something that is going to stay on it this time."

Bruce took the little velvet box out of his pocket and pressed the spring. The lid flew open. Lois could have wept for joy when she saw her diamond again. It was as if some part of her had been taken away and now was being returned to her.

"How about it?" Bruce questioned lightly. "Isn't it going to stay there this time?"

Lois smiled up at him in answer as he slipped the ring on her finger and kissed the finger.

"Let's call your mother in and tell her about it now," Bruce said quickly. He reminded Lois of a little boy who had a new toy that he desired to show off.

"But we haven't talked over anything ourselves yet," Lois reminded him. "I'd rather wait until we were absolutely sure. So many things can happen."

"Crepe hanger . . ." Bruce ejaculated. His lips turned upward in a half smile. He could easily say that because he was a man. Lois told herself. It didn't matter so much to him even if something came along again to break them up. "Don't you trust me?"

Lois wished that she did, as she had trusted him previously. She simply couldn't believe that he was going out with Ariene until she had seen it with her own eyes. She loved him, she knew that, but she wasn't going to set her heart on having him. "You can't love me," she knew. "Lois, if you won't trust me enough to tell your mother that we're to be married."

"I don't want to be disappointed again," Lois told him simply. Bruce looked at her steadily for a moment. He knew in his own heart that there was nothing on earth that could keep him from marrying Lois now. He didn't care what his aunt had to say about it. He was hoping, however, to be able to smooth that over so that there would be no trouble from that source. He really desired his aunt to know Lois and to like her. He knew she would if she would only give Lois half a chance.

Mrs. Corbin came back into the room. She was attired now in her best Sunday dress. Lois could have cried when she saw her. She knew what she had done. Changed from her gingham dress to her silk one so that Lois would have no cause to be ashamed of her. She longed to tell her mother that she need never have any fear of that again.

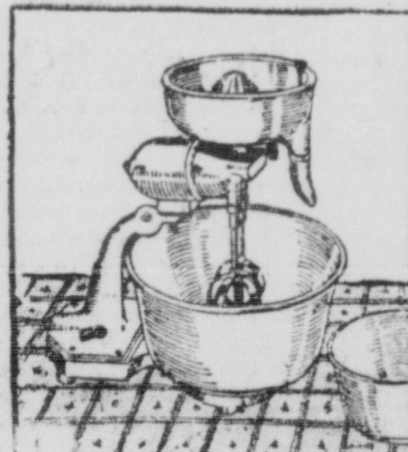

"I thought you might like to stay to lunch," Mrs. Corbin said to Bruce. "I didn't fix anything fancy, but you may like home made things. I baked some of Lois' favorite dishes for her and you may like them too."

Bruce hesitated. He wanted to stay all right but he had stayed away from the office now longer than he should have. He apologized for having to rush away but promised Mrs. Corbin that he would return to eat with her "often." He winked at Lois when he said it.

Lois smiled up at him. "Well, goodby, Lois," he said. He wanted to kiss her, but Mrs. Corbin was standing there and it is difficult to kiss a girl when her mother is so close by.
